

FREE TAX ASSISTANCE

Each year the Internal Revenue Service works to make it easier for people to get tax help. This year taxpayers have more options than ever before to get the help and information they need.

The IRS has expanded the hours of special toll-free numbers for all services, but filers may not have to look any further than their tax package. It has all the information most people need in a new easy-to-follow format.

Taxpayers who still need help this year don't have to wait in line. They can go on-line. The IRS homepage has forms, publications and lots of information available around the clock.

TAX HELP ON-LINE

Taxpayers accessed the IRS homepage on the World Wide Web more than 200 million times in 1997, receiving over 8 million forms, publications and a variety of topic-oriented tax information. Anyone with Internet access can receive:
